Transitioning to become what, Julie. You seem to be suggesting that there is some sort of hierarchy: An individual begins with being a cross dresser, then becomes a transgender, and then becomes transsexual, and then becomes a postoperative transsexual woman.

First, you should understand that wearing women's clothing for the male-to-female transgender or transsexual is not cross-dressing. These individuals are simply wearing the attire appropriate to their gender.

Cross dressing is a totally different issue and a totally different behavior.
A male cross dresser does not want to become a woman. However frequently or infrequently he wears female attire, he continues being content with being a man.

There is no hierarchy.
